

Justice Will Sings

When she remembers her ancestors who suffered in a grave nation
When the great-granddaughter of a slave bravely marches to cast her ballot

Justice will sing

When the judge wearing her hijab is able to bang her gavel and says “silence in the court”
When the woman proudly accepts her paycheck that is equal to her coworkers

Justice will sing

When her abuser is locked in a dark confining cell and she is finally set free

Justice will sing

Because for centuries justice has been silenced
She has screamed till her throat was hoarse but nobody listened
Now we realize she was the voice in the choir we were missing

Justice WILL sing
